

ABSTRACT

A method is disclosed for facilitating the delivery of content from a content provider to a user. The method comprises the steps of receiving authorization from the user to represent the user to the content provider; and negotiating an agreement between the content provider and the user to provide content to the user and to provide compensation to the user for receiving the content. The content may comprise at least one advertisement.